Why H Tip?

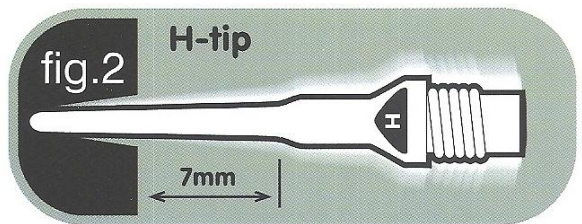

A traditional dart softtip of 26mm external length has a gradually tapered 19mm front section, of which 7mm penetrates the surface of the dartboard. The shockwaves created by the entry of the dart into the board cause extreme vibration to travel back up the tip. (see fig.1) This has two negative effects:

- 1) Tip life is reduced, as stress fractures occur at the point where the tip widens to go into the 'nose' at the front of the dart.
- 2) Player concentration is reduced as the excessive vibration and the continual need to replace broken tips takes their focus off the game.

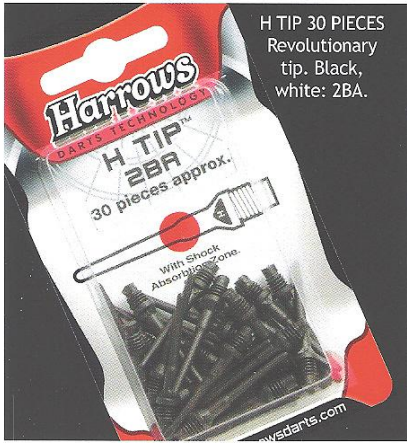

The new H-Tip features a re-inforcing Shock Absorption Zone (S.A.Z.), which is located 14mm from the end of the tip. (see fig.2). The combination of the S.A.Z. and the unique Grafftex composite material results in a super-tough tip

Reduces vibration by 52% for longer tip life and improved concentration!
